

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

NEW YORK, 22/04/2014 - Leading global industry publication, Automotive Supply Chain, announced that AMPORTS had been presented with the Logistics Quality Award at the first-ever Automotive Supply Chain North America 2015.

Automotive Supply Chain North America 2015 was held on April 22 at the luxuriant Plaza Hotel in the heart of New York City, where Automotive Supply Chain played host to the key players of North America's automotive supply chain and logistics industry.

AMPORTS won the award for delivering consistent quality in vehicle handling across multiple locations.

On receiving the award, Richard Killbride, Vice President Business Development, AMPORTS, said: "Thank you so much for this award. AMPORTS works extremely hard at delivering quality. It is something we try to live up to. Thank you so much to everybody here, we are very humbled to receive this award."

Peter Wooding, CEO of Three6Zero Media and Editor-in-Chief of Automotive Supply Chain magazine said: "The awards are to recognise and celebrate excellence in one of the most important and critical sectors within the automotive industry - automotive supply chain and logistics. As the North American automotive supply chain and logistics industry has gathered here today, we feel that we should recognise the industry's achievements. Our heartiest congratulations to the winners and we truly feel that they are industry pioneers and trendsetters in their own right."

About Automotive Supply Chain:

Automotive Supply Chain is the primary source of incisive information on the global supply chain and has been published for many years. With a presence in more than 60 countries globally, the magazine focuses on each and every aspect of automotive supply chain - right from when the parts come in to when the finished car reaches the dealership and everything else in between.

In addition from this highly acclaimed publication, Automotive Supply Chain has also been hosting extremely popular and highly focused events, including conferences and a global award ceremony. Their last event - the Automotive Supply Chain Global Awards - was held in November, 2014 at the very chic art deco hotel Claridge's in the heart of London.

Most of Automotive Supply Chain's previous events were held in Europe and seeing their success and ever-growing popularity, members of the automotive supply chain and logistics industry in North America began asking to have their very own event, leading to the first ever Automotive Supply Chain North America in 2015.

About Automotive Supply Chain North America 2015:

Automotive Supply Chain North America wasn't confined to being a conference, award ceremony, convention or a networking event. The team behind creating this event had one goal - of bringing together the entire industry for one evening, where they are informed, entertained and recognised. And that's just what they did!

The event was an exclusive one and was attended only by top-level executives from not just within the supply chain industry, but also from vehicle manufacturers in North America. Many of the attendees were CEOs, board members or senior executives of supply chain and logistics departments as well as senior purchasing executives of their respective organisations.
